CERT Proposed 2018 Budget Expected to Hold Steady

by James Giese

The Greenbelt Police Department sponsors a citizen-based Community Emergency Response Team (CERT), whose members provide support to the department by performing non-law enforcement duties. Lisa Hegwood and Laura Kressler represented CERT before the city council at its April 5 budget worksession. Under Special Programs, the Police Department proposed budget for Fiscal Year 2018 includes $1,500 for the CERT program.

Kressler told council that the amount requested was the same as for the current year and that the program will spend $1,341. Captain Tom Moreland is the police liaison officer for CERT. Kressler and Debbie Cooley undertook 174 hours of CERT training. In response to a question, Kressler said that CERT does not obtain outside funding. Mayor Emmett Jordan suggested it consider seeking a grant from the Greenbelt Community Founda-

CERT membership is open to all interested city residents, but has drawn predominantly from Old Greenbelt. Hegwood and Kressler would like to see more members from other parts of the community. Councilmember Edward Putens suggested that CERT set up tables at the city's various National Night Out gatherings. Councilmember Konrad Herling offered some names to contact who might help them find new

The two major city events for which CERT assists the police by helping direct traffic are the Independence Day Fireworks and the Labor Day Festival. For the latter, 12 members provided assistance.

Fraternal Order of Police Votes No Confidence in Acting Chief

by Amy Hansen

On April 19, 16 members of the Greenbelt Fraternal Order of Police Lodge #32 issued a vote of no confidence in Acting Chief of Police Thomas Kemp. The FOP, currently in collective bargaining with the city, published a press release on Facebook on April 24 that stated: "It is the Lodge's hope that upon hearing this outcry from its own police officers, the City of Greenbelt will expedite its hiring of a permanent Chief of Police."

In an interview with the News Review, FOP Executive Board Member Scott Kaiser asserted the city's force has been in a downward spiral for several years. "Staffing is real low," he said. "We've lost several officers to other agencies, and more are leaving."

According to the City's budget book, the police department has been operating about 20 percent below the authorized strength of 53 officers. In part, this is due to a half-dozen officers on light duty due to injuries or other issues.

Kemp was appointed acting chief in October 2016. In his reply to a Greenbelt News Review request for comment, Kemp said, "To my knowledge, the FOP has not formally notified the City of Greenbelt of the vote taken.

"This understood, I am certainly disappointed with the purported action taken and the circumstances related to it. I wish to be clear that I remain fully committed to continuing in my position, leading our outstanding Police Department and ensuring that the City of Greenbelt is provided the very best police service possible. Working with the skilled and dedicated members of the Greenbelt Police Department in protecting the citizens of our City and their property has been and remains a constant source of pride. Our Agency will continue to meet the current challenges it faces and move forward resolutely and effectively."

The vote was not taken lightly, Kaiser said as he further explained the unusual move. He said that there was a buzz in the air about the vote, but the meeting on April 19 was not especially called for the purpose of the vote. Rather, he said, it was a regular membership meeting.

"I was surprised that Acting

Museum Challenges and Plans Discussed at Budget Worksession

by James Giese

During the past year, Greenbelt Museum Director Megan Searing-Young was faced with three major challenges, all of which are being satisfactorily resolved. Young reported on these issues as a part of her budget presentation to the Greenbelt City Council at its April 5 budget worksession. The Museum, an original government-built home, is a city operation that receives considerable support from a volunteer group, the Friends of the Greenbelt Museum (FOGM). The proposed city budget for the Museum's operation in Fiscal Year 2018 is $121,800, an increase of $10,700 from the current fiscal

With Young was Ennis Barbery Smith, temporary education and volunteer coordinator, who helped solve one of Young's challenges by filling in during the extended leave of absence of Sheila Maffay-Tuthill.

The most unexpected challenge for Young was the October 2 discovery of two inches of water covering the house Museum's first floor due to a water pipe leak. Moisture had condensed on the walls and ceilings of both floors of the museum and had dripped onto artifacts. While city and GHI crews quickly responded and a restoration company was brought in to dry the place out, it was found necessary to remove many collection items to a dry place and undertake special restoration on some, such as the Oriental carpet in the living room that had belonged to the original residents of the home. Fortunately, adjacent 10-A Crescent had been purchased by the city for a

The Museum has been repainted and an alarm system added to prevent a future occurrence. Meanwhile, the Museum volunteers temporarily offered Sunday walking tours of Greenbelt instead of house tours. A grand reopening is planned for Greenbelt Day weekend in early June, by which time Tuttle will have returned to Young's third challenge was planning and funding for the conversion of 10-A into an education and visitor center with a research and reading room, after the city's purchase of the townhome when it was put up for sale. It will also house the Museum's offices, now the Museum vacating its Comlocated in the Community Center. A capital fundraising campaign is planned with naming opportunities for large contributors. The Museum already has been awarded a Maryland Heritage Areas Program grant of $50,000, a Maryland Department of Housing and Community Development grant of $10,000 for expansion of staff support in 10-A, a Greenbelt Community Foundation grant of $10,000 and a grant of $2,500 from Prince George's County. The Heritage Areas grant requires a museum match of $37,500.

Letters to the Editor

GHI Audit Committee Report

I read the Audit Committee's report, the minority objection and the majority response. In case you live in GHI but don't have the time or the interest in reading these, or need a reason to be interested in reading these or wonder why you should be interested in reading these, here is a quick analysis. The GHI Audit Committee is responsible for reviewing the management of the cooperative to "double check" that the board and the staff are acting as they should per the cooperative's bylaws and rules. It's more than making sure that the meetings are being conducted according to Robert's Rules. It's making sure that the entire co-op is functioning in a sound and healthy way now and for the future. The Audit Committee is like a constitutional check and balance: they don't report to staff or the board. They report to the membership. However, the only power that the Audit Committee has is to report. The power to make changes rests with the membership and their elected board. The Audit Committee's report indicates that there are issues that require fixing, and there are issues that require further investigation. One issue that needs fixing is that there are bank accounts that hold millions of dollars in GHI assets that can be freely accessed by five individuals. That's not good financial policy, or the way things are normally done. At least two signatures should be required for anyone to move money above a certain threshold out of those accounts. More troubling, perhaps, is that GHI's board and staff were made aware of this problem in January, and the only solution offered (publicly) is that they are keeping "a close eye on the accounts." There are other issues. All together, they indicate that there is a strong need for the membership to review what's going on with GHI management and decide what, if any, changes need to be made. The Audit Committee is doing its job when it reports problems. These reports are different from those of recent years, and potentially upsetting, but it will do more harm than good to ignore them. The goal is to correct errors, not rush to judgement or impugn the character of anyone who may have made a mistake or not known that there was a problem for whatever reason. I doubt that anyone with signatory privileges plans to withdraw $5 million dollars and run away to Brazil, or that anyone is "borrowing" GHI money to pay for a new boat. However, not having financial controls in place exposes the co-op to unacceptable risk, and leaves those individuals with signature privileges vulnerable in ways that make me very uncomfortable. There is a lot going on with GHI right now, and we all have limited time, but this seems

I want to give my support to the Audit Committee members. It's not easy to tell people when there are problems, and then to persist in reporting when met with indifference or hostility is even harder. Thank you for doing this.

Leah Cohen

Please Vote No

If you are a member-owner of the Greenbelt Homes, Inc. (GHI) housing cooperative, I hope you will seriously consider voting "no" to one of the petitions being presented to the GHI membership at GHI's annual membership meeting on Thursday evening, May 11 at the Community Center.

The petition for which I am advocating a "no" vote would revise Article VII of GHI's bylaws so that the ability of any GHI elected or appointed committee or task force to hold their meeting at its regularly scheduled day and time would be prevented from doing so if just one of the committee/task force members informs the committee/task force chair of a "recurring obligation" (whether relevant to GHI or not) that conflicts with the committee's already existing schedule.

The petition's verbiage suggests that the bylaw change would "maximize attendance of committee members" at their committee meetings. Is meeting attendance actually maximized if all of the other members on the committee would be faced with the choice of either resigning from the committee or, if possible, changing their own schedules in order to conform to the personal schedule of just one other committee member? Clearly, this would be a case of "the tail wagging the dog."

To illustrate a potential scenario, suppose a particular GHI committee has been holding its monthly meetings on the fourth Wednesday of every month for years. If the proposed bylaw change is adopted, and a member of that committee chooses to enroll in a class that regularly meets on the same day at the same time as the GHI committee, that committee would be violating GHI's bylaws unless the committee agreed to re-schedule its monthly meetings in order to accommodate the personal schedule of only one committee member.

Please help prevent a situation like this from occurring by coming to GHI's annual membership meeting on May 11 and voting "no" to this proposed GHI bylaw change. (In the interests of full disclosure, I currently am a member of GHI's Audit Committee but the views expressed in this letter are my own.)

In Memoriam

Howard Chasanow

by Shalom Fisher

I lived a few blocks from Howard, who was two months younger than I was. I was a grade ahead of him at Greenbelt Center School, now the Greenbelt Community Center. Our parents were both members of the Greenbelt Jewish congregation, now known as Mishkan Torah. As youngsters in our early teens, we both worked on the construction of the current building at 10 Ridge Road. The building was partially built by the members, most of whom were struggling government employees. The management allowed Howard to lay bricks, which was the most prestigious job. I mixed concrete by hand since we had no gasolinepowered mixers in those days. I also carried the concrete in brick hods to the bricklayers.

Howard was the leader of a group of kids that hung out at his GHI townhouse on Ridge Road. He was quite popular, social and outgoing. There was always a crowd of teenagers around him. I was not a part of the group, partly because I was a grade ahead of most of them, and partly because I was quite shy at that age. We were also in the Boy Scouts together. I remember that Howard and I were the only ones of the whole troop who could pull ourselves up by a rope tossed over a limb. I was a skinny kid, whereas Howard was short and agile. We started in the Boy Scouts at the same time, and I remember that Howard made second class boy scout, while I was still a tenderfoot. Later, at the University of Maryland, I majored in physics while Howard was in pre-law. He made all A's and I had a very good GPA. However, we both kept our grade record quiet because within the Jewish fraternity to which we both belonged, most members were more interested in socializing than they were in academics.

Later, Howard went to law school and ultimately was the first Jewish person appointed to the Maryland Court of Appeals.

I used to see Howard and his lovely wife Deborah at religious services. I was shocked at his unexpected death. I wish his family the best.

Mishkan Torah Hosts Plants, Climate Talk

On Thursday, April 27 at 7:30 p.m. Lewis H. Ziska, Ph.D., will present a talk, entitled Nexus of Plant Biology, Climate Change and Human Health, at Mishkan Torah Synagogue. Ziska is a plant physiologist with the USDA's Agricultural Research Service in

According to Ziska, "As carbon dioxide increases in the atmosphere, and as the climate changes, there are a number of secondary effects on plant biology that will, in turn, impact a number of aspects of public health. These include direct effects such as allergies and indirect effects such as nutrition, plant-based pharmaceuticals and pesticide use." In this overview, he will present evidence regarding these impacts and their respective consequences in regard to public health.

This will be Ziska's second presentation at Mishkan Torah. Last year he spoke about the impact of carbon dioxide and climate change on food security.

Hosted by Mishkan Torah's Social Action Committee, this talk is free and open to the public. Light refreshments will be served.

Congratulations to the three Greenbelters who were recognized by the Prince George's County Social Innovation Fund Forty Under 40 list: Anee Korme, education; Alonzo Washington, public service; and Tami Watkins, business.

Local Citizens Annual CROP Hunger Walk

On Sunday, May 7, many Greenbelters will walk in a local CROP Hunger Walk. Organized by local groups, CROP walks support the hunger-fighting development work of the ecumenical Church World Service, which has been helping the poor since World War II. The walk begins at 5211 Paint Branch Parkway in College Park, at the Linson Pool parking lot. Registration is between 1 and 2 p.m. Walkers come from area churches, as well as the Roosevelt Democratic Club. Walkers must have a sponsor or sponsor themselves. The routes, both short and long, are around Lake Artemesia.

Funds raised support a range of programs from direct food relief to wells and water systems, to micro enterprise and loans worldwide. Twenty-five percent of funds will stay local, going to Help by Phone of Prince George's County. CROP Walk chairperson is Marty Folk. For more information, call 301-552-9329.

Tribute: Magnificent Seven Light Up Greenbelt Arts Center

by Jim Link

Tribute, the excellent new production at the Greenbelt Arts Center, is a hilariously funny, yet deeply serious, achingly touching dissection of Scottie Templeton's midlife crisis.

On the brink of his 51st birth-day – "over half a century old!" – anticipating a rapprochement with his estranged son Jud, semi-employed publicity agent and Johannes Factotum Scottie cannot desist from firing off one liners, reducing everything to a gag, sacrificing real intimacy for a punchline or a pun.

Son Jud is Scottie's polar opposite. Inarticulate, socially maladroit, serious about his graduate work and career goals and bitter about paternal neglect, Jud harbors a deep jealousy of his dad's gift for joy, for giving pleasure to myriads of friends.

After Scottie discovers he has a terminal blood disease, friends rally around to pay tribute to him. A gradual, subtle shift takes place in the second act as the audience realizes that Scottie is not the sole focus of the play. The wonderful dueling between father and son raises the question: Who really needs to grow up? The irresponsible Peter Pan dad with a radiant gift for madcap joy? Or Jud, the eternal victim who holds a grudge, whose every activity is planned ultra-precisely, who lives life strictly by the book?

"Have you ever done one crazy spontaneous thing in your whole life?" Scottie asks Jud.

It's a great credit to Carlos Olivi (Jud) that he more than holds his own, blow by blow with larger than life Larry LaRose (Scottie). LaRose recently dazzled GAC patrons as Truman Capote; he can play a drama queen or a Shakespearean king. In Tribute he's the hateful guy you have to love.

But Olivi and LaRose are not acting in a vacuum. Veteran director Gayle Negri and her producer husband Andy have gathered a magnificent cast. Not only has director Gayle coaxed wonderful performances from them, she and Jeane Binney have costumed them sumptuously.

Bob Kleinberg as Scottie's faithful long-time buddy Lou Daniels, looks great in a tux. Barbara Lambert as Maggie Stratton, Scottie's ex-wife, is wonderfully droll, sympathetic, forgiving and wary by turns.

Edye Smith is Scottie's devoted martinet doctor Gladys Petrelli, whose orders Scottie defies at every moment. Elizabeth Dapo is Scottie's worldly friend Sally Haines, who is willingly fixed up with Jud. She's the first to see that Jud is a "project" as challenging as his father.

Carlos Olivi as Jud Templeton has an indoor picnic with Sally Haines (played by Liz Dapo).

Last in this list of magnificent seven is the redoubtable Mary Rogers as Hilary, the semi-retired agile hustler and good time gal who gives Scottie a delicious tribute indeed.

Award winning Roy Peterson dressed the set and collected all those 70s circa tchotchkes. Randy Barth deserves kudos for the photographic montage of Scottie mugging, laughing and crying in the hospital with his friends.

Spontaneous or phlegmatic, puritanical or Dionysian, you will be delighted by Tribute. Performances are Fridays and Saturdays at 8 p.m. and Sundays at 2 p.m. through May 13.

City Council at Worksession Listens to Washington Ear

by James Giese

Neely Oplinger, executive director of Washington Ear, met with the Greenbelt City Council at its April 5 budget worksession to report on the activities of her organization and discuss its financial needs. Washington Ear is supported by local jurisdictions throughout the Washington metropolitan region and received a Greenbelt contribution of $1,000 this fiscal year. It will get the same amount next year if the proposed city budget for Fiscal Year 2018 is approved without change.

Washington Ear is a reader service for the blind. Initially volunteers would read newspapers, periodicals and other material over a special radio broadcast band to which visually impaired persons could listen. The Ear now also provides reader services over the telephone, which enables listeners to select what they wish to hear. Oplinger said that 14 residents now benefit from the service, of which 10 use the telephone. She reported that there are also four dedicated volunteers from Greenbelt. One, Glenn Harris, reads the Greenbelt News Review each week among other things, including its adver-

Oplinger reported that the Ear covered live the recent Women's March on Washington, the coverage lasting for 10 hours. She said the organization also planned to cover the March for Science.

Asked if Washington Ear might be affected by federal proposed budget cuts, Oplinger said that the Ear does not directly receive any federal funding. However, the service is a sub-carrier of public radio station WETA-FM and could possibly be affected by cutbacks of public radio funding.

For more information about Washington Ear services go to its website, washear.org.

Meals on Wheels May Need A Bigger Slice of the Pie

by James Giese

It pays to bring a dessert treat when asking for financial support from the Greenbelt City Council. At least, Jim Hautsck of the local area Meals on Wheels got to be first on the list of organizations and city departments to make a pitch for funds being included in the proposed budget for Fiscal Year 2018 at the city council's April 5 budget worksession. And no councilmember expressed lack of support for the city again contributing $2,000 to the organization, while one councilmember suggested that even more might be necessary for the city to provide. But then again, every other group that night making a budget presentation was warmly received by the council.

The Meals on Wheels nationwide program provides meals to homebound handicapped and senior citizens. It is mostly federally funded, but additional support is received from both the county and local area municipalities. Volunteers assist in the distribution of the food to individual homes and Hautsck said that there were eight to 10 volunteers from Greenbelt.

There have been press reports of possible substantial cutbacks in funding to this program by the federal government. Councilmember Judith Davis said that the city may have to increase its contribution to help make up for the loss of these funds.

Sometime after Hautsck's departure, plates, forks and the chocolate treat were passed around for not only councilmembers, but staff, citizens present and even this lowly reporter to

Bike Blender Powers New Co-op BizKidz Smoothies

by Matt Arbach

Today's smoothie flavors are strawberry, banana and peach. Add the fruit to milk or coconut milk, and add some white grape juice. Then turn on the blender. But the blender isn't just operated with a switch, it is a bike blender. One of the young members of BizKidz whirls and hops on the pedals of a modified bike and creates the power for the smoothie.

BizKidz is one of the latest co-ops in Greenbelt. Made up of two dozen elementary school students from Greenbelt West, the group started August 31, 2016 and met through March 26, 2017. They learned to develop and implement their own co-op smoothie business, using "bicycles to blend the smoothies," said their mentor and project creator Tim Cohen-Mitchell.

BizKidz members also sourced their ingredients locally, Cohen-Mitchell added. The participants were able to "learn about nutrition, local food systems, sustainable transportation, co-ops, dynamic governance, entrepreneurship and finance," he said.

BizKidz came about through a partnership with Carolyn Lambright-Davis, a board member of the Chesapeake Education, Arts and Research Society (CHEARS) and the coordinator of Earth Squad. Earth Squad was created in 2006 and is now centered at Springhill Lake Elementary School. All grades are represented and its mandate includes creating "young environmentalists," says Lambright-Davis, as well as fostering a zeal for "volunteerism and healthy living."

Cohen-Mitchell received a grant from the Greenbelt Community Foundation for the Biz-Kidz project.

The seven-month process for BizKidz included weekly training sessions at the Springhill Lake Recreation Center and resulted in three sales events: one each at Schrom Hills Park, Franklin Park's fall festival and Eleanor Roosevelt High School.

In addition to learning all the details and skills involved in the smoothie operation, there were lessons in consent decision-making, where emphasis was put on general, if not perfect, satisfaction for all. The participants were placed into rotating groups, each assigned a particular task. By the end, each youngster had experience in every aspect of the business, from food preparation to finances. This kept their interest and developed flexibility.

Cohen-Mitchell said he was impressed by the remarkable ability of the participants to take in and implement the copious and detailed requirements asked of them. Cohen-Mitchell said they learned that "this is your business," that the responsibility lay with them and "they had to do the work." The participants proudly rose to the challenge, mastering the intricacies of things such as bookkeeping, marketing and publicity.

The students, many of whom are part of Earth Squad, placed an emphasis on eco-friendly products. The proceeds from sales went mainly into providing ingredients and supplies.

namic Community Governance (CDCG) and was inspired by its governance strategies for this project.

Formed in 2014, CDCG "empowers Greenbelt community groups," says co-president Aileen Kroll, through the use of their Dynamic Community Governance approach. Both Cohen-Mitchell and Lambright-Davis participated in a foundations-level CDCG training course. In addition to CHEARS, CDCG has also trained representatives of several Greenbelt community groups including the Old Greenbelt Theatre, New Deal Café, Public Works and environmental advocacy groups. In 2015, CDCG acquired non-profit status.

The Greenbelt Community Foundation will be at the 13th Annual Green Man Festival on May 13. For over 10 years the foundation has funded community projects like BizKidz that enhance learning, social development and entrepreneurship.

Dispose of Rx Drugs

The Greenbelt Police Department will accept expired, unused and unwanted prescription drugs on Saturday, April 29 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The service, part of the Drug Enforcement Administration's (DEA) National Drug Take Back Day campaign, is free and anony-

During last year's Drug Take Back campaign, the DEA and over 4,200 state and local law enforcement agencies collected nearly one million pounds - about 500 tons - of unwanted medicines at over 5,000 sites nationwide.

Proper disposal of unused prescription medicines addresses a vital public safety and public health issue. Drugs languishing in home medicine cabinets are susceptible to diversion, misuse and abuse, and studies show that a majority of abused prescription medications are obtained from family and friends. In addition, disposal methods such as flushing drugs down the toilet or throwing them in the trash pose potential safety and environmental health

The DEA accepts only pills and patches and cannot take liquids, needles or sharps. For more information about drug disposal or the annual Take Back Day event, go to the DEA Diversion website.

The Department is offering a reward of up to $1,000 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of a suspect in any of the unsolved crimes reported in the blotter.

Call 1-866-411-TIPS. People may anonymously report suspected drug activity by calling the Drug Tip Line at 240-542-

City's Website Introduces New Information Wall

The new Greenbelt Info Wall, at greenbeltmd.gov/infowall, features current information on Greenbelt events. Posts from the City of Greenbelt, the Greenbelt police, Greenbelt Animal Shelter, Greenbelt Recreation, Greenbelt Arts and the Greenbelt Aquatic & Fitness Center will appear on the wall as well as the city's Twitter and Instagram feeds.

"The City currently administers six different Facebook pages. The Info Wall makes it easier to access the postings from all the sites," stated Public Information Coordinator Beverly Palau.

The new wall has the look and feel of the popular Pinterest site, where pictures and short paragraphs invite exploration.

"Several different hosts were considered," Palau explained. The host company, Flockler, is based in England. "Flockler offered a very affordable way to try out the wall concept with very little risk. It is hosted on a month by month basis," she said.

The Info Wall also features an events board, informational videos, press releases, environmental posts and a Municipal Minutes area highlighting city employees. Additional boards are planned for the future.

For more information, suggestions or comments, contact Beverly Palau at palau@greenbeltmd. gov or 240-542-2026.

Indian Creek Watershed Cleanup At SHL Rec Center for Earth Day

by Connor Roessler

The Annual Earth Day Indian Creek Watershed Cleanup was held at Springhill Lake Recreation Center on Saturday, April 22. A group of 42 volunteers, dedicated organizers from community groups and five Public Works employees commemorated the event by picking up litter from Indian Creek and working on gardening and planting projects in the CHEARS Three Sisters Demonstration Gardens and Greenbelt Food Forest. This service-learning opportunity brought individuals, families and volunteer groups of all ages and backgrounds together to make a positive impact on the environment by clearing litter from the creek banks and planting Chesapeake Bay-friendly native plants.

The event began with the reading of the Earth Day Proclamation from Mayor Emmett Jordan. Afterwards, the City of Greenbelt Environmental Coordinator, Erin Josephitis, provided information on the many stormwater best management practices at Springhill Lake Recreation Center, including permeable pavement, rain gardens, a rain cistern, organic community gardens and a food forest. Maggie Cahalan, the founder of the Chesapeake Education, Arts and Research Society (CHEARS), was presented with an award for her continued volunteer contributions to the City of Greenbelt. Kim Walsh, volunteer with CHEARS, and Lincoln Smith of Forested LLC led a tour while sharing the history and goals of the Greenbelt Food Forest to provide edible plantings for current and future generations. Carolyn Lambright-Davis and the Earth Squad led the volunteer group in the CHEARS chant to kick off the volunteer projects.

Once the orientation was over, volunteers were split into two groups. One group helped with planting projects in the Greenbelt Food Forest and Three Sisters Demonstration Gardens while another group walked to Indian Creek to pick up litter. Over 385 pounds of litter were removed from the Indian Creek watershed including plastic bags, plastic water bottles, chip bags, Styrofoam, metal cans, a tire and a basketball. An estimated total of 150 pounds of litter was sorted and recycled. The City of Greenbelt Department of Public Works, Greenbelt Advisory Committee on Environmental Sustainability (GreenACES), Alice Ferguson Foundation and CHEARS sponsored the event.

bagels and to Starbucks of Greenway Center for donating coffee. Special thanks to individuals from Forested and Greenbelt Biota for volunteering and to Kris White of the GHI Companion Animal Committee for educating the public on proper pet waste removal during the event. The importance of volunteers cannot be overstated as they play a key role in protecting the environment.

Earth Month continues with the City of Greenbelt's Spring Clean Up Green Up Volunteer Event on Saturday, April 29 from 10 a.m. to noon at Schrom Hills Park. Chief Kemp didn't show up," Kaiser said. "He is a member."

Kaiser said the Lodge has 84 members total, but that number includes retired members. The number of active police officers who are members is 39, and, of those, 20 attended the quarterly meeting during which a motion was tendered from the floor and seconded – spurring a vote.

"It (the motion) was discussed for quite a while," Kaiser remarked. The vote was 16 in favor of the vote of no confidence, two against and two abstaining. Kaiser said he and another officer met with Kemp directly afterward to let him know.

"We know it is devastating. We don't want to hurt the guy," Kaiser said. "But we needed to do something drastic to get some results before we don't have a department anymore."

Kaiser said the department has had to drop several special units and is working "an unbelievable amount of overtime." Kaiser also stated that morale is low because of overtime and because of perceived slights to officers who have not received recognition for their work in apprehending armed robbers. He also attributed morale issues to criticism received by officers for not doing more when they already feel stretched thin.

The FOP issued a press release on April 24 stating that the vote took place. The press release said that the Lodge intends to provide additional information to city officials in the immediate future regarding this vote in order to make clear the areas to be addressed by new leadership.

City Manager Nicole Ard said that she could not comment on complaints without seeing them in writing. "Since I have only received anecdotal comments from staff, I defer to the FOP to provide information on the FOP vote and press release," she said.

"Acting Chief Kemp is receiving considerable feedback from FOP members who did not participate in the vote and who express their support for Acting Chief Tom Kemp. I too have received such comment," she added.

"I have confidence in Acting Chief Tom Kemp," said Ard.
"Tom has worked hard to take over a department following retirement of a long-serving chief and other officers. I am also confident in the many Greenbelt officers who, like Tom, demonstrate professionalism, pride, passion and dedication to continual improvement in service. I look forward to working with Acting Chief Kemp and the FOP as we serve our community."

Ard also said the collective bargaining process continues to move forward and noted that she "cannot discuss the details of negotiations at this time."
